Cyviz AS has secured a new contract through its strategic alliance with IBM, supporting the expansion of IBM's Cyber Campus program at Middle Tennessee State University (MTSU) in the United States.

The project forms part of IBM's broader cybersecurity education initiative and will provide an advanced environment for cyber defense training, simulation, collaboration, and workforce development. The IBM Consulting Cyber Campus program for universities includes a consortium of alliance partners with Cyviz, Amazon Web Services (AWS), and Cloud Range.

The award represents another milestone in the growing relationship between Cyviz and IBM. Since establishing their strategic alliance, the companies have collaborated on multiple IBM Cyber Campus and IBM X-Force Cyber Range projects across North America and Europe, helping educational institutions and enterprises strengthen cybersecurity capabilities through immersive learning and operational environments.

"This latest order is another milestone in our collaboration with IBM and underscores the value of combining Cyviz technology with a leading global partner," says Espen Gylvik, CEO of Cyviz. "As the partnership continues to expand, we see increasing opportunities to address new customer needs and scale our business internationally."

IBM has become an increasingly important global strategic alliance partner for Cyviz. The relationship now spans multiple IBM programs, including Cyber Campus, Cyber Range, and Innovation Studio initiatives, creating opportunities across both educational institutions and enterprise customers.

Cyviz continues to execute its partner-led growth strategy, expanding its market reach through global technology alliances while delivering advanced visualization, collaboration, and control room solutions to customers worldwide.

The value of the contract has not been disclosed due to commercial confidentiality.
